QUEST Camp!

How did you spend your spring break? A group of eight marine science students spent theirs camping on the beach learning various marine survey techniques through the QUEST program. QUEST stands for Quantitative Underwater Ecological Surveying Techniques and is based off the QUEST program offered at the University of Hawai'i. As its name implies, QUEST teaches students a variety of methods or "techniques" to survey different marine organisms, such as coral, fish, limu (algae), and other invertebrates. Upon completion of the course and passing the final species ID test, all participants earn a QUEST certificate which is recognized at all University of Hawai'i universities, as well as at local agencies. QUEST ran from Monday, March 12th to Saturday, March 17th and was held in Fagaalu Bay. If you drove by the old Boy Scout trailer and saw a bunch of tents, you saw QUEST camp!

During QUEST, students learned about ecology of coral reefs, some of the threats facing them today, the importance of monitoring reefs and their inhabitants, how to conduct monitoring, and how to correctly design research projects. Students learned how to collect and analyze their data, and how to correctly interpret them. QUEST uses all local survey methods to ensure our students will be competitive in the local marine science job market. This is one way to help build local capacity in marine sciences.

QUEST received rave reviews from this year's participants, who all agreed that it was one of the most challenging courses they took, but also one of the most rewarding and fun. QUEST is open to students of any major; however priority is given to marine science majors. QUEST is a joint effort between the University of Hawaii Sea Grant College Program and ASCC Marine Science. If you are interested in QUEST, please contact the marine science coordinator, Kelley Anderson Tagarino at 699-9155 x 356, email K.Anderson@amsamoa.edu or stop by her office in A-1.

The More You Know...

April Fool's Day

It is widely proclaimed that April Fool's Day originated in France in 1562, or thereabouts, when Pope Gregory replaced the Julian calendar with the Gregorian calendar in the Julian calendar month of April. The day of introduction of the Gregorian calendar was made the first day of January. Some people hadn't heard about the change in the date, so they continued to celebrate the New Year's Day, being April 1st. So, others called them "April fools." The fact is that Pope Gregory XIII ordered Thursday 4 October 1582 to be the last day of the Julian calendar. The next day was Friday 15 October. The April Fool's Day tradition in France includes poisson d'avril ("April's fish"), attempting to attach a paper fish to the victim's back without being noticed.
